A new home project in Miami Beach, Fla., has been awarded LEED Platinum status and is, to the best of public knowledge, the highest-scoring LEED home at 120/89.5 in the nation.

The best part? All doors and windows in this record-setting project were manufactured by CGI Windows & Doors.

The 2020 Alton project is a joint effort of developer Matthew Lahn of the Florida Green Home Design Group and architect Ari Sklar of Sklararchitecture.

Our Estate Collection windows and doors were the perfect match for this fantastic project, and we at CGI are very proud to be a contributor to this historic LEED achievement. Not only are our windows beautiful and well-made, they're the best choice when it comes to energy efficiency.

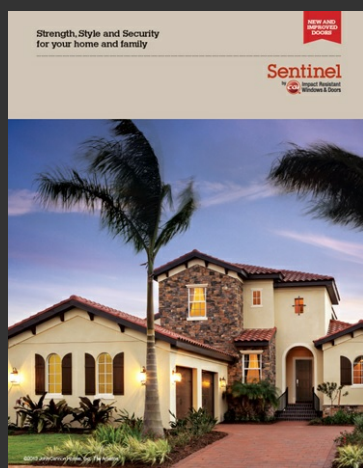

A few kind words from the 2020 Alton builder: "When building a home like 2020 Alton, material selection is key," said Matthew Lahn of the Florida Green Home Design Group. "Finding windows that achieve a maximum level of impact resistance while remaining super energy efficient and airtight is no easy task. CGI Estate Collection windows meet and exceed these parameters – plus they offer superior quality, top-level fit and finish, flawless functionality and they're architecturally beautiful."

Visit the CGI website and read our new white paper on how to choose impact windows and doors. The comprehensive document discusses why impact windows are a necessity in wind-borne debris regions and offers in-depth information on additional side benefits including added security, lower energy costs, lower insurance costs, UV ray reduction, sound reduction, resale value and more.

Additional information covers glass options and full information on CGI's line of impact resistant doors and windows. Give it a read and let us know your thoughts. Read the full white paper here.
